

NASP membership helps you succeed with essential resources and member-only discounts.

Learn and Grow Professionally

Communiqué Newspaper—Increase your knowledge and awareness with the latest news and highlights on practice, trends, and innovations in the field. The Student Connections column focuses on topics of special interest to graduate students.

School Psychology Review Journal—Stay up-to-date on the latest research and cutting-edge expertise shaping the field with school psychology's most prestigious peer-reviewed journal.

School Psychology Forum Electronic Journal—Gain insight into effective approaches to translating research into practice on key issues in the field with NASP's refereed, online only, and interactive journal.

Online Resource Library—Meet your day-to-day research needs with easily accessible articles, podcasts, student fact sheets, and much more, organized by topic for your convenience.

Publications—Take advantage of the 20% member discount on the latest high-quality books and multimedia in the field.

“What a student learns about school psychology is limited to their professors and textbooks. The Communiqué exposes me to more.”

— Darlene A. Sousa, Washington State University

About NASP

The National Association of School Psychologists (NASP) is the largest, most influential organization of school psychologists in the world, with over 26,000 members. For over 40 years, NASP has been setting standards for training and practice, advocating on behalf of children and families, and providing quality professional resources to its members. NASP programs and services are guided by an elected leadership body of school psychologists. They dedicate their time and expertise to ensure that NASP continues to be the leading edge in quality services for children, families, and schools.

Join Today

Join or renew today at www.nasponline.org and take advantage of all of the benefits.

The National Association of School Psychologists represents school psychology and supports school psychologists to enhance the learning and mental health of all children and youth.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF SCHOOL
PSYCHOLOGISTS

4340 East West Highway, Suite 402
Bethesda, MD 20814
(301) 657-0270
(866) 331-NASP, toll free
(301) 657-0275, fax
(301) 657-4155, TTY
www.nasponline.org

NASP STUDENT MEMBERSHIP

Supporting Your Professional Growth

Renew or Join Today

(301) 657-0270 or toll free (866) 331-NASP
www.nasponline.org

“NASP provides resources that are critical to a school psychologist in training.”

— Jill Snyder, BA, University of Northern Colorado

Prepare for Your Career

Handouts for Parents and Teachers—Enhance your effectiveness during your internship with downloadable resource materials to use with parents, teachers, and other professionals.

Student Fact Sheets—Find tips and strategies on a range of key academic challenges, including developing your vita and professional portfolio, preparing for interviews, and best practices for internships.

Career Center—Explore job and internship opportunities close to home and across the country.

Nationally Certified School Psychologist (NCSP)—Gain recognition and qualify for additional salary benefits, in some states and districts, by applying for the NCSP credential at deeply discounted member rates.

Professional Liability Insurance—Protect yourself, both during your internship and beyond, by applying for professional liability insurance from top providers, with member-only rates that offer significant savings.

“Being a NASP member has enhanced my professional development.”

— Allison Bukowski, Loyola Marymount University

Network and Share With Your Peers

Annual Convention—Learn from respected experts and come together with your peers at the annual convention in Philadelphia, February 21–24, 2012. Deeply discounted student registration rates make it accessible, and exclusive student events make it advantageous.

Mentoring Program—Explore career opportunities and make connections for future employment by interacting with practitioners.

Online Communities—Interact with other school psychologists in the new online Communities. You can also share resources and blog!

Interest Groups—Come together with your colleagues around specialized areas of interest and practice.

Protect Your Profession

Promote the Value of the Profession—Advocate for the school psychology field and the role of a school psychologist with adaptable presentations, handouts, and related materials, and support efforts to address national and local threats to title, practice, and employment.

Advocacy and Legislative Support—Influence national and state legislative policies and practices affecting children’s learning and development with easy-to-use tools.

“I have been able to connect with practicing school psychologists and other graduate students via the Communities.”

— Celeste Malone, Temple University

To learn about all of NASP’s membership benefits, visit www.nasponline.org.