DISSERTATION:

A Program Evaluation of a School-Based Mental Health Program

Chairperson: Gloria Miller, Ph.D.

ABSTRACT: This dissertation reviews a newly developed school-based mental health program established to address the mental health needs of middle school students. This program was a first year, secondary prevention school-based mental health program called "T-School." School-based mental health programs have been evaluated in the past, however most program evaluations have focused on outcome measures and not on the implementation process. This program evaluation was designed as a formative, naturalistic program evaluation using primarily qualitative research methods. The primary focus of this program evaluation was on the planning, implementation, and communication processes involved in establishing and implementing a school-based mental health program. The issues and obstacles encountered while establishing and developing a new program are highlighted. Results of the evaluation led to recommendations for program enhancement and improvement in the following 11 areas: building a trusting, collaborative relationship between school and mental health agency, creating a program infrastructure, enhancing communication and problem-solving, establishing leadership roles, discussing legal issues, incorporating teachers, fostering partnerships with agencies and parents, establishing funding, and specific outcome goals to measure in the future. The results of this evaluation will help fill the literature gap and provide a framework for others to plan, implement, and facilitate successful communication in order to establish a comprehensive school-based mental health program.

GRANT/CONSULTING WORK

1. Focusing on Results. A NCLB Grant for the Matanuska-Susitna Borough School District, Palmer, Alaska. Project Coordinator: Joe Girard. (August 2007 – April 2009)
Project trainer and consultant for grant focusing on increasing student outcomes by providing quality professional development within the 3-tiered Responsiveness to Intervention Model (RTI). Conducted two on-site workshops for school teams specifically focusing on how to integrate an RTI problem solving model within each school and consistently among schools, how to use student data to track individual student progress and provide for flexible grouping to meet academic needs, and also how to gather and utilize school data to track the systems change and progress occurring within each school. Provided on-going consultation throughout the school year.
2. Readiness and Emergency Management for Schools (REMS) Technical Assistance Center & EMT Associates, Folsom, CA. Project Coordinator: Joel Phillips (January 2008- February 2008)
Hired as an independent contractor to help develop materials for the REMS school crisis website. Contributing author to REMS Newsletter article: Barriers to Collaboration.
3. Reeves, M. & Luehrman, J. (2001-2004). Title V grant: Building assets for bright futures.
Co-facilitator for multiyear $30,000 grant, "Building Assets for Bright Futures." Teams from 9 Cherry Creek School District elementary schools comprised of administrators, teachers, mental health professionals, nurses, and intersession enrichment programs were trained in a family and organizational systems perspective to enhance pre-referral intervention strategies, classroom management, and communication skills. This project also provided ongoing consultation and support for schools to form and/or continue problem-solving teams within their building. The focus was on developing measurable, outcome-based goals for each individual student referred, with follow-up and data analysis to monitor effectiveness of intervention. Problem solving teams are still operating in all of these schools and the concept has become initiated district-wide using an RTI/Problem Solving approach.
4. Reeves, M. & Luehrman, J (2002-2003). Colorado Department of Education Sliver Grant: Building assets for bright futures.
Co-facilitator of a $48,000 grant to offer the "Building Assets for Bright Futures" grant to secondary grade levels and other districts. We had participants from alternative secondary sites and Denver Public Schools.
5. Reeves, M. & Luehrman, J. (2001-2002). Title V grant: Building blocks for bright futures.
This grant provided training materials and additional consultation to help support the implementation of the "Building Assets for Bright Futures" grant.
