Seeking At-Large Members for the NASP Publications Committee

The NASP Publications Committee is looking for two NASP members to each serve a three-year term on the NASP Publications Committee. Individuals seeking to join the committee must be a NASP member in good standing, have interest in publishing, have a commitment to stay current in evidence-based practice of school psychology, and want to share their passion for innovation and growth with other likeminded professionals.

Purpose of the NASP Publications Program: To advance the profession of school psychology by developing resources that reflect NASP’s mission, vision, and strategic goals; promote evidence-based practice; assist professionals in enhancing the mental health and educational development of all children and youth; provide scientific and theoretically sound information with regard to psychological services to children and youth; support professionals’ advocacy work on behalf of all children, youth, and the profession; and contribute to the financial health of the Association.

Publications Committee Structure: This committee consists of a chair, cochair, and a maximum of four additional at-large members. These members reflect, to the greatest degree possible, the geographic, gender, racial, and experiential diversity of school psychologists and NASP. The editors of School Psychology Review (SPR), Communiqué (CQ), and the NASP Historian/Archivist serve as voting members. The NASP President and the Strategic Liaison for Information Services are ex officio members of the committee.

Meetings: The Publications Committee has quarterly meetings held virtually throughout the year.

Functions: The committee works collaboratively with NASP staff to provide guidance on new publications and provide feedback on journal and newsletter publications. The committee is actively engaged in planning website resources, including identifying needs for updating, sunsetting, or developing new web resources.

Role: At large members are expected to attend all meetings, contribute to the development of new resources (e.g., provide feedback on plans for new book “Requests for Proposals,” provide suggestions for potential resource authors/reviewers, encourage authors to meet deadlines), and collaborate with other committees, as needed.

Interested self-nominated NASP members may send a resume and cover letter indicating your qualifications to serve to Corey Lee, Publications Committee Chair, coreyskyelee@gmail.com, by December 1, 2023.
