

What happens when traditional parent-teacher conferences are replaced with family-school conferences (FSCs) that include children as active participants? We will provide results of a study that show significantly positive benefits including increased bidirectional communication and greater parent and teacher satisfaction within the typical 15-20 minute conference framework. Practitioners will learn how they can implement family-school conference training as a means of improving collaboration between home and school.